Did you know... Grade 7-12 science and math teachers get paid more than most college faculty with equivalent experience.

Below is a comparison of college teaching faculty with grade 7-12 teachers. College teaching jobs require at least an MS and most a PhD. Grade 7-12 teachers typically begin with a BS and most have earned an MS by mid-career.

Teaching faculty typically spend 80% of their time teaching and the remaining helping out in the department. They do not have research requirements and are evaluated on their teaching.

Note: Tenure-track professors were not included since that job looks very different. They have limited teaching responsibilities and are primarily research-focused. This type of faculty in BS granting departments have similar salaries to grade 7-12 teachers, but those in PhD granting departments tend to make more.
