

Your journey with GFO continued

Making the most of GFO resources

Planning a full GFO campaign

Craft your strategy

A successful GFO campaign includes presentations, posters, flyers, social media, and visits to a range of campus events including admissions events, student life activities, clubs, and classes.

Tailor all the GFO resources

Tailor a full suite of GFO resources for your local context. Include local teacher salary data and information on retirement benefits for your state. Add in your branding and contact information. You can even update the colors to match your institution's branding. Data for your locale can be found on the GFO website.

Robin from FSU created her own large-scale bulletin board spread with posters, infographics and facts for her hallway.

Jean from UIndy displaying her custom, resource-stocked table setup.

Joe from Lewis University incorporated GFO messaging and facts into his local teacher preparation website.

Presentations!

The 'Busting Myths' student presentation is our most effective tool for improving perceptions about the teaching profession. A successful GFO campaign should include regular presentations to the students your program draws from as well as their peers and faculty whom they interact with.

Register your GFO activities and you're now a 3-star Champion!

Your early journey with GFO

The first steps for using GFO resources to recruit the next generation of STEM teachers

Getting started with GFO

Get to know the facts

A good first place to start is to look through the facts that the GFO team has compiled and tested to help recruit STEM teachers.

The Explore Teaching page shares info prospective teachers ask about, while the Facts and Data page shares additional facts that faculty wonder about:

Now that you've started

Share the facts more broadly

With some GFO-backed conversations under your belt, you are ready to start sharing facts about the teaching profession with a wider audience.

If you haven't already, dig into more of the local data on teaching for your area. GFO has data for over 300 locations and can help collect data for your area if it's not already on the site.

Incorporate GFO messaging about the facts into your program flyers or on your program website. You could also share GFO memes on your Facebook page or on Instagram.
